conference. Sister Powell was born November 2, 1833; embraced religion, and joined the Church, at Barlow, Ohio, in the spring of 1851; was married April 10th, and left home the same day for her new home in the west. She was attacked with the cholera on the boat, on the way up from St. Louis; reached Keokuk on the morning of the 23d, and died at the Ivan's House, in that city, at six o'clock, P. M., of that day. Her friends find much to comfort them, in the midst of the deep sorrow that this dispensation of divine Providence brings to their hearts, in the knowledge that, though it has taken them by surprise, it was not so with her. A few days before she left home she remarked to her mother that she had been aroused several times, during the previous night, with the impression that some voice was calling to her, "Prepare to meet thy God!" and then confessed that she felt much less personal interest in spiritual things than formerly, and that this must be asspecial call to increased devotedness to God and his holy service; and from her husband's letter to her father I can not doubt that she heeded it. On her journey she was unusually serious, and spoke of her declension in religion with much feeling, and upon the first invasion of disease she called for her Bible, reviewed its gracious promises, pleaded them at the throne of grace, and rested not till, in triumph, she passed off to glory, which was signalized to her surrounding friends by her expressive gestures, her "Glory to God!" She is not lost; but gone
